(PRWEB) December 28, 2009 -- Adelmo Guidarelli, made famous by, Ryan Seacrest's newest production Bank of Hollywood, will headline Rutgers Day, Saturday, April 24, 2010 at Rutgers University – The Birth Place of College Football. OPERATION ADELMO has been chosen as the official Rutgers Family Day ambassador performance at the Jane Voorhees Zimmerli Art Museum. "OPERATION ADELMO is a completely family friendly show," Guidarelli said. "It's like when Disney produced Willie the Operatic Whale with Nelson Eddy. We also have interest coming in from Branson. OPERATION ADELMO would be a perfect fit there, too!"

OPERATION ADELMO is the best of family entertainment that's out there today. All ages and demographics, from the novice to the expert, enjoy this show that encompasses everything from a night at the Metropolitan Opera to a day with Bugs Bunny on the Warner Brothers lot. "After all the clowning around, he really can sing," stated UNICEF Goodwill Ambassador Angelique Kidjo. "This guy has a special gift," Tony Award winning performer Ben Vereen pronounced after singing with Guidarelli.

Guidarelli has worked with such operatic luminaries as, Luciano Pavarotti, Gulletta Simonato, Licia Albanese, Renata Scotto, Sherrill Milnes, and Robert Merrill. He has performed in Europe with Opera Evreux of France, as soloist in Orff's Carmina Burana in Imola, Italy, at The Vatican before Pope John Paul II, in London before Queen Elizabeth, as well as Spain, Portugal and Germany.
